How to become a fashion designer: turning a passion into a profession

The passion and interest in fashion, fabrics, garments, colors and the composition of everything usually begins at an early age. If you want to turn this passion into a career, you might ask yourself “How do you become a fashion designer?”. The Swiss Fashion Academy’s fashion design course offers a clear answer to this question. The course lasts a total of 12 months. If you have already taken the Sewing and Tailoring or Sewing, Tailoring and Modeling courses in advance, this time will be credited. In the theoretical subject areas, the focus is initially on fashion history, fabric science, the labor market and computer graphics. This is followed by practical learning content and exercises. In both areas, students should have enough initiative to consolidate what they have learned at home.

Create your own collection – Boost your career in fashion design at the Swiss Fashion Academy

Enrol at the Swiss Fashion Academy and start your career as a successful fashion designer. The Academy offers a comprehensive training program where aspiring designers can hone their technical skills and develop their creativity under the guidance of experienced industry experts.

At the academy, students undergo rigorous testing by experienced fashion designers to ensure mastery of basic skills such as the safe use of sewing machines. This hands-on training is complemented by an in-depth study of design elements, trends, styles and textures, preparing students for a successful career in the dynamic fashion industry.

A highlight of the program is the opportunity to design your own fashion collection, which culminates in a major fashion show and serves as the ultimate test of skills. The successful presentation of this collection not only demonstrates your talent, but also earns you a prestigious diploma from the Swiss Fashion Academy and opens the doors to a fulfilling career in fashion design.
